- Target group:
 - People with foreign qualifications living in Germany and abroad

- Objective target: improving the employment opportunities of migrants

Developments and improvements since the Brain Waste Survey

- In the last couple of years recognition of foreign qualifications has become an important topic in Germany.
 - paradigm shift: focus on skills and potential of migrants
- 01.04.2012 The Recognition act (Anerkennungsgesetz) came into force
 - the Recognition Act introduced a universal legal entitlement to assessment of foreign qualifications, regardless of the applicant's migrant status and nationality
- federal recognition laws have taken effect in 12 out of 16 federal states

Remaining obstacles in the recognition procedure

- complexity of the legal basis
 - the Recognition Act doesn't apply to all professions and is subsidiary to sectoral laws
- the recognition procedure can differ from authority to authority
 - different authorities ask for different documents
 - no mandatory standards for the crediting of professional experience
- access to adaptation measures (adaptation period or aptitude test) is difficult
 - very few training courses
 - problem of how to finance the adaptation measure

- financing
 - costs for translations, certified copies and the recognition procedure are often very high
 - no financial support for people who work in underqualified jobs

- it is difficult to make applications from abroad
 - applicants have to know where exactly in Germany they want to work as there is no national recognition office but hundreds of responsible authorities
 - in some cases only certified translations from Germany are accepted

Self-image Anerkennungsberatung

- specialist counselling as an essential offer during the recognition procedure
- individual and comprehensive information about possibilities of recognition, the recognition procedure and responsible authorities
- counselling and steering tailored to the particular needs in the recognition procedure
- create transparency to be able to develop a vocational perspective

- The role of specialist counselling:
 - identifying structures that enable or interfere with the access to full recognition and transfer the knowledge to political decision-makers
 - experts in the field of recognition who maintain a constructive dialogue with the authorities to create a win-win situation for all parties

- » The overriding objective is to bring about structural changes that will improve the recognition system in Germany
